Prophet no loss

This week we are beginning a teaching series on stories from the life of the prophet Elijah. I don't know what you think of when you think of a prophet? Perhaps a wild bearded character shouting out old fashioned warnings and predictions? (Although some of them were women).

Someone rather removed from our modern way of life? In some ways Elijah fits the stereotype. You might remember stories of amazing miracles done by Elijah in God's name.

Yet in spite of that, Elijah comes across as remarkably human. He has his triumphs as well as his struggles. He sees great answers to prayer but he also suffers from exhaustion and burnout. I believe he has much to teach us, across the years, about prayer, speaking truth to power, courage and the faithfulness of God. I look forward to exploring this with you.
